Four essential factors to consider when choosing the right wetsuit

Fit

It's really important to get the right fitting wetsuit – over 40% of people select the wrong size wetsuit first time. We understand the differences in the cut and shape of the wetsuits – asking for a person's height, weight and body shape will give us a good understanding of the best wetsuit to fit. We are happy to advise over the phone and this is a UNIQUE service. In addition we size check EVERY wetsuit that is ordered and we will have a conversation if we think a different size or wetsuit will be more appropriate. Over 97% of all our orders are correctly size checked – this means that the swimmer gets a great fitting wetsuit and minimises returns – saving time and money for everyone.

Price

Price is definitely an important consideration. For novice swimmers we will tend to recommend a low to mid priced wetsuit. If budget permits, we would suggest going for a mid-range wetsuit as these tend to give the swimmer more buoyancy and warmth – purchasing an ex-rental wetsuit makes a great option and are great value for money enabling you to buy a mid level wetsuit at a budget price. For the more experienced swimmers with a number of key races on their schedule we usually suggest one of the more expert wetsuits which give more flexibility in the water – an important factor in any race particularly a longer distance swim. The important thing is that with over 25 wetsuits – there's a wetsuit to suit every budget and ability.

Brand

We offer a choice of over 25 wetsuits from 5 of the top Triathlon brands – 2XU, Zone3, Blue Seventy, Huub, Mako

Each brand has its unique sizing chart. To help, we publish these charts on our website – we also ask purchasers for their height and weight and any additional information they can give us is really helpful – such as body shape (e.g. broad shoulders etc). From our experience we know when we may need to offer a different size or even Brand based on this information.

Swimmer's Ability Novice to Ironman

Most triathlon wetsuit manufacturers have an entry-level, mid-level and expert wetsuit. Some base their range on race distance, some on buoyancy, some on body shape. For novice Triathletes, without a swimming background we suggest a wetsuit that will give them more buoyancy in the water – this will generally put the swimmer higher in the water and means they will swim faster. Stronger swimmers generally prefer more flexibility in the arms and shoulder in order to maintain their technique and stroke, especially over longer distances.
